Declares Purpose Is to Standardize Long-Distance Work Throughout Country-Rates Said to Be Generally Lower_Than Before.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Postmaster-General Burleson to-day sent to Con-gressman Doolittle the information called for by a committee of the House of Representatives regarding the pused by his department in arriving the new rates for long-distance of and probable adjustments of local rates. In his letter, which was given to the press by the Postmaster-General. Mr. Burleson asserts the new toll service is the most genomical and efficient that the present-day science of tolephony can provide.

The purpose of the new schedule of telephone toll rates is to standardize the long-distance service throughout the country and to establish uniform charges. Congress is told. The toll service is not local in character, and unlike exchange service, is largely conducted over the limes of more than one company and across State boundaries. When the Postmaster-General took over the operation of the telephones the difference in toll rates and in the method of bandling toll buginess on many routes were such as greatly to complicate the quoting of through rates. The result was unascessary delay and waste of effort in handling long-distance traffic and corresponding inconvenience and expense to the public. Under the toll rates now established the foil service is an interpregional service, available to all Americans, at all times, everywhere.

TRIES TO INTRODUCE:

Mr. Burleson goes on to say that in preparing the new rates he has endeavored to introduce additional forms of service required by the public, to make substantial reductions in charges where they were excessive, and to increase the charges where they were excessive, and to increase the charges where they were excessive, and to increase the charges where they were excessive, and to increase the charges where they were excessive, and to increase the charges where they were excessive, and to increase the charges where they were excessive, and to increase the charges where they were excessive, and to increase the charges where they were excessive, and to increase the charges where they were excessive, and to increase the charges shown clara williams in charges and the excention of the telephone to the charges of the tole same bill is shown Clara Williams in charges and the excentine will be seen in the sensational Oliver Mo and probable adjustments of local rate In his letter, which was given to the press by the Postmaster-General, Mr. Burleson asserts the new toll service

Mr. Burieson goes on to say that in preparing the new rates he has endeavored to introduce additional forms of service required by the public to make substantial reductions in charges where they were excessive, and to increase the charges where they were inadequate.

"For example," he said, "the distinction between calls for a particular person at a particular station was established for the whole country. This distinction is based on sound engineering principles. Messages handled by the person-to-person method by the station-to-station method. by this method in the past. The rates, too, he says, are generally lower than those formerly in effect. Similar considerations, he contends, justify the new report charges. The information reported to the telephone user may not always be of value to him, but it has been obtained at a considerable expense, and it is fairer to charge the expense against the party who originated the call than against others, "Moreover," it has been obtained at a considerable expense, and it is fairer to charge the expense against the party who originated the call then against others, he says.

"Moreover," says Mr. Burleson, "in many cases, regretiably, reports from the stations that the particular person called for and which were not available have been made a medium of conveying important information. Thus the parties were able to evade payment, and gross frand was successfully perpetrated upon the company, abel to make a reasonable charge for this class of service."

The government took over the telephone in a period of advancing rates, the Postmaster-General says, several companies having already secured the approval of State public service commissions to advances, and the others would have been compelled to follow suit if the government had not come to their relief.

EQUAL DISTRIBUTION

BAYONET CEASES OPERATION

Bulletin Announces That After Mon-

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

CAMP LEE, VA., Feb. 6.—With a view to bringing about a more equal distribution of the ration, the daily allowance for the subsistence of soldiers of this command will be revised April I, Major Bourke, the camp quartermaster, announced to-day. Under the new system, the allowance for the three meals, which is 49 cents for this month, will be increased 10 per cent in companies that feed from fifty to seventy-five men, and 5 per cent will be added to the credit of companies feeding from seventy-five to 106 men. In organizations that provide mess for between 100 and 150 men the ration allowance will be cut 5 per cent, and a reduction of 19 per cent will be applied to companies having a membership of from 150 to 200 men.

The companies having the larger number of men to feed can live more economically than those maintaining only small messes, so it was decided to reduce their allowance and apply the money thus saved to the mess funds of the smaller companies, which usually are unable to make a saving, because they buy and cook in comparatively small quantities.

QUARTERMASTER TO SUPPLY

GUARTERMASTER TO SUPPLY

BULK OF FOOD USED

The camp quartermaster also announced that 75 per cent of the foodstuffs consumed by the various organizations stationed here are purchased from the quartermaster storehouses.
Mess sergeants are permitted to purchase certain articles from civilian dealers, but they have learned that these same articles can be had from the quartermaster at a much lower figure than is charged by the wholesalers of Petersburg and other near-by towns. The officers' messes, for which no allowance is provided by the Sovernment, also buy most of their foodstuffs from the quartermaster.

After Monday of next week, according to the headquarters bulletin, all organizations in the camp will be prehibited from purchasing meat and meat products, poultry and fish from merchants in towns near the cantonment. All such purchases in the future will be made through the camp supply officer. The new arrangement is necessary, it was stated, in order to comply with orders from Washington that all meat and meat products must be inspected and passed before delivery to troops.
